Raven Lining Systems is a leading supplier of epoxy systems for the protection and renewal of wastewater and potable water infrastructure. Raven products include epoxy coating systems designed for structural lining in manholes, pipelines, tanks and other deteriorated structures. Their system consists of customized equipment and proven installation processes and is delivered via a network of Certified Applicators. Raven also manufactures several polyurethane-based products which are formulated to fill specific niches in target markets. Polyurethane is one of the most widely used polymers in the world and lends itself applicable to many different types of applications. More information about the company's history, complete line of products and training program can be found on their website.
